

SSAT's 20th National Conference will give delegates the opportunity to think, debate, and shape how schools can deepen learning for all, and leave a lasting legacy as we innovate in learning.

We suggest that the education we provide to young people today will not only be measured by their examination results, but by the life chances and opportunities offered to them over the next 25 years and beyond – this will be the legacy we leave.

Our conference this year addresses the need to focus on the real purpose of education – teaching and learning. It will explore the legacy of innovation that has had real impact in schools and importantly will begin to establish an agenda for the next 25 years and beyond.

At this time of radical change it is essential that headteachers define the purpose of education and not allow an assessment framework to dictate curriculum and pedagogy. We need an accountability framework that recognises the importance of developing students as deep learners and demonstrates the progress made by all. This conference will explore how we can deepen children's learning by doing things differently. The networks will provide the support and guidance needed to implement change that benefits students. We are stronger by working together.

INNOVATING LEARNING SSAT 20TH NATIONAL CONFERENCE 2012

Be inspired, network with like minded colleagues and take practical ideas away with you to improve learning for your students.

As a delegate representing a primary, special or secondary school you will be involved in the largest, most dynamic and innovative education conference in the UK. You can network with colleagues and reflect on new ways of working. You will leave energised and full of practical ideas to take back to your school. In addition to hearing leading keynote speakers, delegates will have the opportunity to personalise their programme by selecting from a wide variety of school-led showcases, breakfast sessions, workshops and panel debates.

- Debate the conference themes with other delegates.
- Engage with new thinking.
- Enjoy networking opportunities.
- Share real experiences.
- Inspire one another.
